Bablin Molik says - Help us fight Labour's Cardiff Congestion Charge

Cardiff South and Penarth campaigner, Bablin Molik, has called on residents to oppose Labour plans for a congestion charge in Cardiff.

Labour looked at introducing a 'London style' congestion charge for motorists last time they ran Cardiff Council. But the proposal was scrapped when the Lib Dems took control of County Hall in 2004.

Now, after just weeks back in power, Labour are once again considering the controversial plans.

Bablin Molik said: "The last time Labour tried to do this they wanted to charge people crossing the boundary into Cardiff. That would really hit people in the Vale hard. They're asking Vale motorists to pay for transport improvements in Cardiff!"

"A charge would be bad news for our local economy. The focus now should be on investing in better public transport links, not on hammering motorists."

Bablin Molik says that Cardiff's Labour Council should be investing in public transport not hammering motorists.
